Starting Point for my research were the theories of Geiger and Noiré about the origin of language from the 19th century. Geiger comes from etymology and Noiré developed a sociological approach. Both are not very well known today but have some enlightening points. I will check them against modern views for example ‘gesture first’ theory of language origin or thoughts about ‘universal grammar’ as a dividing point between animal and human language. Most important point is my perspective, which is grounded in Modern Phenomenology with it’s key concept of ‘subjective body’.
