主たる研究テーマ Principal Research Subject	Verbs describing verbal and nonverbal communication in modern fiction.
Preparing for an article which will be published soon in our department's biannual volume IDUN, I have been studying relations between stylistic and thematic structures in modern prose, especially short stories by contemporary female writers. I have used observations of relations between stylistic choices on sentence level by a writer of modern Danish prose and the thematic structure of a short story. The verbs describing verbal and nonverbal communication tell the dramatic story. Secondly, using empirical observations of typical problems of my advanced students of Danish, I have helped learners to look through difficulties with idioms, verb-object collocations, prepositions etc. – My approach to disentangling the problems is a combination of grammar and logic based on my teaching experience. The aim is not always to draw universal conclusions, but to accumulate a representative material, which can hopefully inspire to further exercises. I benefit a lot my Japanese and Danish colleagues' feedback.
